

JIM AND KATHY OCEAN

Music for the MetaQuizzical

Life-long explorers of the human species, Jim and Kathy Ocean use songwriting and performance as a way to interpret and share their perspectives and observations. Their original music is a stimulating, folk-rocking romp through science, politics, satire and spirit. They call it "Music for the MetaQuizzical".

The Oceans' environmental disaster song "Plastilla" has been made into a video and is being used as curriculum in Fresno Unified schools.

Their song and video about Dark Matter "Said the Dark to the Light" recently won audience favorite at a film festival in Paris.

Jim & Kathy have performed with the Smithsonian's 'Beyond' exhibit, played at the annual Bioneer's Conference in Marin, and have opened for so many astronauts they may soon be the first folk duo in space.

They are developing a project called "Astronaut Lullabies"--an immersive multi-media live concert planetarium experience that they hope to tour at planetariums and schools around the country.

What others have to say:

"Poetic and courageous, the Ocean's songs are intelligent, sometimes witty, sometimes serious, always deeply moving. Like a classic movie, their music remains relevant, fresh and worthy of listening to over and over." --Paul Tumolo, Wild Plum Records

"Smart musical wanderings through the comedies and tragedies of the human experience. Nick Drake meets the Beatles meets Nietzsche with a solar flashlight and a GPS." --KD

Website: www.JimOceanMusic.com

Blog: www.MetaquizzicalCafe.com